A Historical Fiction Novel
by Kay Adams and Nancy Markey

“Kay Adams and Nancy Markey combine meticulous historical research with masterful and intimate storytelling. The result is a dynamic page-turner that transports readers to the splendor of Gilded Age Newport while spotlighting a forgotten case that demands attention.”

A HARBOR OF DECEIT A Gilded Age Tale of Money, Murder, and Madness

Two gunshots. A hasty suicide verdict. And a city determined to bury the truth alongside the body.

In the glitter of Gilded Age Newport, the home of a wealthy Black entrepreneur became a crime scene that polarized the nation.

When a veteran medical examiner refuses to look past a “hasty” suicide theory, young attorney P.J. Galvin must take on the city’s entrenched establishment to prove otherwise.

The narrative is a meticulous reconstruction, walking readers through the visceral forensics of a midnight autopsy and the mounting legal tension as reported to a captivated public in 1885.

Research: Tethered to the factual timeline of 1880s Newport, this novel utilizes extensive research into archival newspaper accounts, probate records, court documents, prison records, and reference books to bring the social tensions, early forensics, and the “Black Elite” society of Rhode Island to life with historical accuracy.
